

Africa Safari Serengeti Kusini

A bush camp in south Serengeti

Africa Safari Serengeti Kusini is located in the southern Serengeti National Park, in the corridor of the famous wildebeest migration, offering sightings of all the wildlife you would expect from the Serengeti. The Kusini Plains captivate tourists with its expansive savannahs and rich wildlife diversity. Here, the spectacle of millions of wildebeests and zebras in rhythmic migration unfolds against a golden grasslands backdrop. Beyond the migratory herds, the area hosts an array of resident wildlife, including lions, giraffes, buffalo, and elephants.

The nearby Kusini airstrip provides easy access to the camp. Being strategically located where the annual wildebeest migration begins, travellers utilizing the airstrip may be lucky enough to witness the migration from a unique perspective.

The Kusini Crater is not an actual volcanic crater, but rather a circular-shaped grassland surrounded by a forest of acacias. Offering dramatic vistas and lush vegetation, it serves as a haven where diverse wildlife congregates around watering holes visible from the 'crater's' rim.

When travelling between Kusini and Ndutu, there is the opportunity to discover the Hidden Valley, a depression and water catchment area teeming with wildlife during the green season. This region, known for its predatory action, often witnesses large clans of spotted hyenas wallowing in the muddy shores.

27 Accommodations with stunning views over the valley mean there's a good chance of spotting wildlife from your bed in the morning. 23 Luxury Glamping tents, furnished with locally crafted furniture and ensuite bathrooms, provide a comfortable retreat amidst the wild beauty of Africa's plains. The 4 Safari Family accommodations, catering for up to six guests, are perfect for families seeking a safari adventure.

Our bush camp is located on the Kusini Plains in southern Serengeti, a secluded safari hideaway off the beaten track.

Open all year round - 365 days - 24/7

Serengeti National Park

With vast open plains and an abundance of wildlife as far as the eye can see, the Serengeti is a safari maker's dreamland. Because the park is so vast, it is advisable to spend several days exploring. Serengeti National Park stretches over 14,763 square kilometres and is easily the largest and perhaps the most popular of the Northern Circuit's National Parks. Serengeti is host to the Great Wildebeest Migration, when some six million hooves walk across the open plains, as more than 200,000 zebras and 300,000 Thomson's gazelles accompany the wildebeest on their journey to fresh grass.

Kusini Area

The Kusini Plains is a remote and very serene corner of Tanzania's south-west Serengeti, - a spectacular game-viewing area encompassing high concentrations of cheetah, honey badger, golden-backed jackal, and hyena. The surrounding short grass plains provide the setting for the most spectacular natural phenomenon on the African continent, the wildebeest migration. The short rains in November and December nurture nutrient-rich pastures, sustaining wildebeest herds until the long rains end. Most calves are born in January and February. Despite the relative safety of open grassy plains, the newborns attract predators like lions, leopards, cheetahs, and hyenas, highlighting the delicate balance of life in the ecosystem. However, the crown jewel here is a secret spot nicknamed 'Kusini Crater', a circular grassy plain completely encircled by dense acacia trees, which is known for large wildlife concentrations including cheetahs.

Seronera Area

Serengeti's Seronera area is located in the south-central region of the park and is known for a large number of big cats; the lion, leopard and cheetah are often spotted here. Elephants, giraffes, hippos, crocodiles, buffalo, and impala are also well-known inhabitants. The area is very popular because it is one of the most likely places to see a hunt. The landscape is dotted with "kopjes", rocky granite or gneiss protrusions, more than 550 million years old and highly loved by some cats as lookouts during the hunt.

DID YOU KNOW?

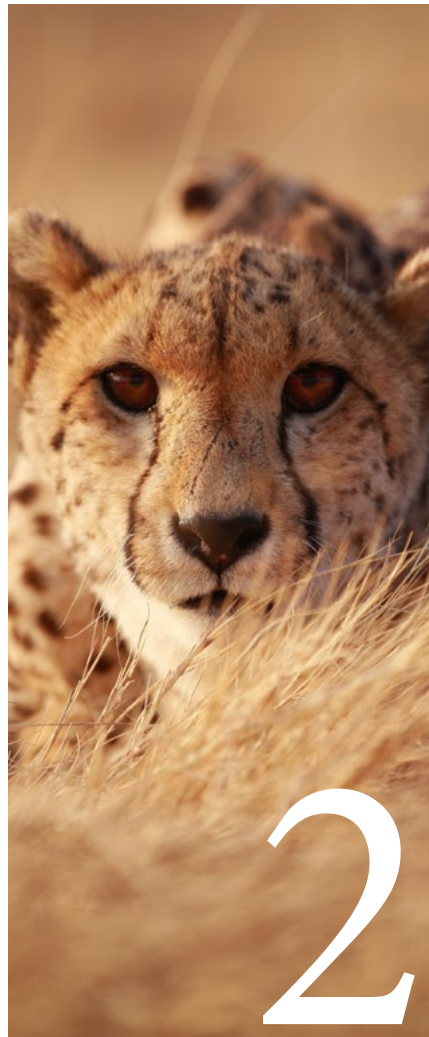

KOPJES

Scattered across the expansive Serengeti savannah are granite outcrops, resembling rocky islands amid a sea of grass. They are called 'kopjes', and were formed when the soft volcanic rock and ash that covers Serengeti were eroded to expose the extremely old metamorphic rock below. Not only serving as vital habitats for Serengeti's wildlife, these kopjes provide a scenic contrast to the surrounding plains but also a fabulous vantage point for Serengeti's many predators.

SERENGETI CHEETAH PROJECT

Since 1975, SCP has meticulously documented cheetah encounters across the Serengeti plains. The Serengeti Cheetah Project is a vital conservation initiative focused on studying and safeguarding cheetah populations in Tanzania's iconic Serengeti National Park. Led by dedicated researchers and conservationists, the project employs monitoring techniques to track cheetah movements, assess habitat dynamics, and mitigate human-wildlife conflicts. Through education and community engagement, it strives to ensure the long-term survival of these magnificent big cats. Whilst one can't visit this initiative as a tourist, it's fabulous to know that this project is operational.

5 FASCINATING FACTS ABOUT THE MIGRATION

Wildebeests depend on zebras! While wildebeests favour grass shoots, zebras graze on tall grass. As zebras move on, wildebeests feed on the shorter grass left behind.

Wildebeest calves can walk within minutes of being born whilst zebra foals can even run after an hour. This is essential for their survival and even then, only one in three calves will survive.

Lions only eat every three or four days and average 6 kgs per 'sitting'. When not eating for even longer periods, a fully grown male lion can consume up to 40 kgs which is a quarter of its weight. This period of gluttony is often followed by up to 24 hours of sleep.

The Great Migration comprises a primary herd and satellite herds that rhythmically merge and divide. It is believed that glands in wildebeests' hooves release pheromones onto the ground, allowing dispersed herds to follow the trail and stay connected.

Just as humans have unique fingerprints, wildebeests have a unique grunt, thereby allowing a mother and foal to locate one another in a large herd or when it is dark.
