Lake Manyara National Park

Located at the base of the Great Rift Valley escarpment, Lake Manyara National Park is a compact yet remarkably diverse safari destination. A bird lover's paradise, more than 400 species have been recorded here. The park is especially famous for the thousands of flamingos that gather along the shores of the alkaline lake, creating a striking pink fringe along the water's edge. An entrance road winds through dense groundwater forest before opening onto lakeshore plains where zebra, wildebeest, giraffe and buffalo can often be seen grazing. The park is also known for its hippos and its unusual tree-climbing lions, sometimes spotted resting in the branches of mahogany and acacia trees.

Tarangire National Park

Tarangire National Park is a fun and easy park to explore. The game is abundant and exposed because the park is more compact, and the terrain is open. In the dry season, the Tarangire River is the only permanent source of water. Tarangire National Park is 2850 square kilometres in size, making it the sixth largest park in Tanzania. It offers the highest concentration of wildlife after the Serengeti. Tarangire is known for its Baobab trees and the large herds of elephants that can be seen from close by. Other animals that can be seen are wildebeests, zebras, buffaloes, gazelles, rhinos, warthogs, impalas, pythons, lions, leopards and almost 500 species of birds.

NGORONGORO CRATER

Nothing quite prepares you for the sheer beauty of the Ngorongoro Crater. Standing at the rim, looking out over the vast expanse below, with clouds drifting along the edge and a cool mountain breeze in the air, it's a moment that really stays with you.

A UNESCO World Heritage Site, the crater is the world's largest intact volcanic caldera and is often referred to as the eighth wonder of the world. Its natural enclosure creates a unique ecosystem, supporting an incredible concentration of wildlife. Here, you'll find the Big Five, including the rare African black rhino, as well as zebra, elephant and hyena, among many others.

The Ngorongoro Crater is a must-see highlight on any northern Tanzania safari.
